Harker Heights Kiwanis Club Meeting 01-15-19

Speaker: Kayte Ricketts, Education Coordinator

Topic: Bell County Museum - The history of the Bell County Museum begins in 1899, when the Belton Women's Wednesday Club requested a library grant from steel magnate Andrew Carnegie. His approval of a $10,000 library grant resulted in the construction of the Belton Carnegie Library. The building was completed in 1905. Belton's Carnegie Library served citizens until 1975, when the Lena Armstrong Public Library opened nearby. Permanent displays: Passport Through Time examines the historical journey of Bell County by focusing on its people, places, and historical events. The exhibit portrays Bell County's unique place in Texas history, and its close relationship to the early peoples of Central Texas, rugged spirit of the West, and links to state and national history. The Gault Site has been home to human beings for over 13,000 years. It is strategically located in the Balcones Ecotone, the boundary zone of the Edwards Plateau and the Black Prairie/Coastal Plain Ecozone. The analysis of materials at the Gault Site provides archaeologists with a unique look into the lifestyles of the earliest people in Texas and, by extension, the earliest peoples in the Americas. Little River Log Cabin In 1995, Grant and Jeanny Smith purchased the cabin and had it dismantled by Salado artist Lonnie Edwards. In 2001, the Smiths donated the cabin to the Bell County Museum. Special Events are featured each year. The "Lonesome Dove" exhibit opens this week. “The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.”

Publius Huldah states: “In a nutshell, our Constitution authorizes the federal government to handle the following objects for the Country at Large:

- Military defense, international commerce & relations;
- Control immigration & naturalization of new citizens;
- Domestically, to create a uniform commercial system: weights & measures, patents & copyrights, money based on gold & silver, bankruptcy laws, mail delivery & some road building; and
- With some of the amendments, secure certain civil rights.”
